Trailer Trailer

. . . Thanks for that nice article on Rex Trailer in the January 17th issue of TV Digest. One minor point, however, should be cleared up for the sake of Rex's young following. The article states that Rex quit school at 14 to go into rodeo work. That's true, but it fails to point out that Rex continued his schooling while working in rodeos, dude ranches and night clubs. He not only finished high school but ended up at Columbia University in 1948.

J. J. Kelly, WPTZ

• Rex Trailer failed to point out that fact to us and thank you for calling it to our attention.—Ed.

Became A Mama

. . . Some months ago Ginny Graham dropped out of TV because of approaching motherhood. Has the blessed event occurred yet?

Dorothy Wiener, Phila.

• Yes indeedy, congratulations are due Bob and Ginny Graham. Their firstborn, Janice Kay arrived at 11:59 P.M. on January 6, weighing in at 6 pounds, 12 ounces.—Ed.

Who's Hank O'Hare?

. . . Every week in your book, we read the "Bouquets 'n' Barbs" which Hank O'Hare gives out. Why not give us a look at this guy and tell us about him?

Cathy and Ruth, Trenton, N. J.

• Hank is a bit camera shy. However he won't mind us passing on a few facts about him. He's 43 years old, married and has two children. A modest and retiring chap, he's not at all the tough character he seems to be in his columns. A former pro as a newspaperman, musician and in the theatre, the combination seems to weld well as a TV reviewer.—Ed.

Slowing Down To Ninety

. . . I see that Bill Slater is not on "Twenty Questions" any more. Why?

Mrs. J. Leonard Eicholtz, Landsowne, Pa.

• After two decades of bearing a tremendous radio and TV load, Bill Slater made the decision to lighten that load by eliminating one of his more hectic, weekly TV appearances.—Ed.

Missing Chordette

. . . Are my eyes deceiving me, or do I note a new face in Arthur Godfrey's Chordettes? What happened to the girl who used to be "second from the left?"

Carolyn Thomas, Phila.

• Dorothy Schwartz is on a leave of absence from the Godfrey show . . . time out to prepare for a visit from Sir Stork.

Gabby Facts

. . .How old is Gabby Hayes and is he married? Does he have children?

Louis Harvath, Jr., Phillipsburg N.J.

• George (Gabby) Hayes was born on May 8, 1885 in Wellsville, N. Y. He's married but has no children.—Ed.

Where's Waring?

. . . I have missed Fred Waring in his regular Sunday night spot. What has happened?

Joseph Hunter, Phila.

• Waring has taken a mid-winter vacation from TV and the Pennsylvanians are on tour, fulfilling engagements cross country. Whenever possible the TV program will be telecast along the route.—

Such An Error!

. . . After viewing "Trouble With Father" and "Life Of Riley" I am inclined to believe that the parts of Jackie and Junior in each respective program are played by Wesley Morgan. Am I correct in this belief?

D. E. Kalbach, Wernersville, Pa.

• How wrong you are! It's true that "Junior" is played by Wesley Morgan in "Life Of Riley" but "Jackie" in "Trouble With Father" (the Stu Erwin Show) is played by a GIRL! She's portrayed by "tomboy" Sheila James.—Ed.

video vignettes

Jane Froman

Singer-emcee of "U.S.A. Canteen", Jane Froman, has been named chairman of the N.Y. State Easter Seal Appeal for 1953. . . . Ford Foundation, whose project "Omnibus", has hit the top in TV sponsorship, is mulling over plans to present a similar venture for the kid set. . . . Screwball Ernie Kovacs has recorded his original theme, "Oriental Blues", and another ditty entitled, "Hot Cakes and Sausage". Both discs feature the music of the Tony DeSimone trio. Ernie himself vocalizes on the latter song. . . . Susan Delmar and Dana Wyatt, the actresses whose hands are the only thing seen on TV between them recently completed 444 performances on Kraft Television Theatre.

Skelton reported to be ready for his return to video. This time show will be either live or kinescope, with live presentation having the inside track. . . . Survey by leading TV commercial company indicates babies best cheesecake for TV sales appeal. The wee tiny tots are most effective of all. . . . New tele-film western, "Annie Oakley", will feature Gail Davis. . . . Jack Haley and Dorothy Lamour working on a TV series, "Family Act", which they'll try to peddle to a sponsor. . . . Julius LaRosa's initial platter, "Anywhere I Wander", fast hit on the market. Trade credits Godfrey's continual plugging of both singer and record for rapid success of the disc.

Red Skelton

June Valli

Hit Parade sponsor looking for an alternate backer to pick up the tab every other week. Show is reported to be costliest half-hour in TV, with $40,000 production cost. . . . Jack McComb, seen often in tough cop roles on "Man Against Crime", is one of original Keystone Cops. . . . John Cameron Swayze added new laurels to his long list of honors when he was recently named one of 10 best-dressed men in U.S. . . . Fans apparently believe Marie Wilson's a secretary. 20% of her fan mail comes into CBS written in shorthand. Because the shorthand letters are equally divided between Gregg and Pitman methods, net has hired two stenogs, each adept in one particular shorthand system, to translate.

Lush screen star, Yvonne DeCarlo, being considered for TV series. Plans won't jell 'til fall, due to her movie commitments. . . . Cathy Lewis tentatively set for leading role in MGM movie. . . . Theme music of "Foreign Intrigue" to be expanded into concerto. Music is original written by Charles Norman. . . . "Studio One" may be cut to alternate week appearance in near future. . . . "Sandy Wright, World Scout" is new dramatic-adventure film series soon to be produced in cooperation with Boy and Girl Scouts of America. . . . "Today", early ayem 2-hour stanza which recently started its second year with a larger group of backers, may get the axe treatment.

TV'S Greatest Romances

History's Romeos and Juliets have nothing on Video's

TOP TEAM: Marion Marlowe and Frank Parker put their hearts in their songs every Wednesday evening. Between shows, who knows?

ON St. Valentine's Day, the yearly date set aside for "the exchange of compliments by sweethearts," it seems only fitting that television's contribution to the world of romance should be considered. All the world loves a lover and on St. Valentine's Day televiewers should be more aware than ever of some of TV's great romances.

One of the most famous of such video teams is Marion Marlowe and Frank Parker. Perhaps it's the secretiveness surrounding their supposed romance that attracts the fans, perhaps it's their affectionate manner onstage, but no matter the reason, Marlowe and Parker are the favorite love duo of today.

Conflicting Ideas

There seems to be two schools of thought on this romance. There are those who insist the love affair is on the level. These fans interpret every glance exchanged by the duet as messages of adoration and affection. They sincerely believe that when they see Marlowe and Parker on the screen they are truly viewing an ideal love.

The other school, comprising the die-hards, cynics and non-romanticists, pooh-pooh the idea of an offstage romance. They declare that the endearing glances, the sly clasping of hands, the "moo-cow" eyes that the singers cast at each other, are strictly for publicity. They take odds that when the stars close up shop and move from in front of the cameras they hardly speak to each other, go their separate ways and have never even had a date together. They contend that 49 year old Parker is old enough to be Marion's father (at least the latter is perfectly true).

Actually, whether Marlowe and Parker will really end up Parker and Parker is anybody's guess. But so long as the romantic illusion is retained by this pair while before the cameras, the romantic fan, the guy or gal with the spirit of Valentine in his heart, will be happy and the cynic may continue to conjecture.

FAMOUS PAIRS: Ozzie and Harriet, Lucy and Desi, George and Gracie, are all real-life marital duos who combined romance and career successfully. Puppet Kukla admits the very human Fran is his special "cutie," shows it in his gestures, glances and voice.

One of the most poignant of the fictional video attachments is that of Kukla to Fran on the famous "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" show. Fran is the sweetheart of all the Kuklapolitans but there is a certain something about the bits she does with Kukla. A turn of Kukla's head, a shy twist of his hand, purveys to the viewer that the round-headed, bulbous nosed puppet holds Fran very dear to his heart.

Kukla Her Favorite

Fran can also be accused of a show of favoritism when it comes to Kukla. Her tones take on a bit more gentle edge, her smile becomes more personal and again the viewer gets the feeling that these two are mighty fond of each other.

Of course, of all the real-life husband-and-wife teams seen on television, the best known and best loved are Lucy and Desi. They have integrated their own personal life so expertly into their video life that the arrival of the Arnaz baby necessitated the announcement of Mrs. Ricardo's expectancy.

Fans were well aware of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz's tempestuous romance and married life long before the pair hit the coaxials. Desi, the Cuban sensation of the theater and night club circuit, announced his marriage to the explosive redheaded Miss Ball on the stage of the Roxy Theater in New York. Immediately the columnists set up odds on how long the marriage would last. Eleven years later Mr. and Mrs. Desi Arnaz are the pride of the television world.

The viewer realizes that behind the slapstick and shenanigans that go on during the "I Love Lucy" half-hour, Ricky Ricardo and his dizzy spouse are deeply in love with each other, as much as Mr. and Mrs. Arnaz. As Desi himself explains it, "'I Love Lucy' means more to me than just the title of a radio and TV series . . . the phrase 'I Love Lucy' is the key to my heart . . . every week it's my way of saying to the world how much I adore my beautiful, talented wife, Lucille Ball."

George Burns and Gracie Allen are a pair who appeal to Mom and Pop on the romance angle. They represent 26 years of happy married life and depict on the screen perhaps not a quite normal family life but at least a companionable attitude which inclines Pop to quietly take Mom's hand in silent agreement.

Another popular romance that has been brought into the home via TV is that of Harriet Hilliard and Ozzie Nelson. Theirs is at the family stage, between the blooming era of Lucy and Desi and the settled down phase of George and Gracie.

Many Others

Television boasts many other married teams, including Mike and Buff, Raymond Scott and Dorothy Collins, Sydna Scott and Jerome Thor (of Foreign Intrigue), Keith and Sylvia Textor, Fred Vandeventer and Florence Rinard (of Twenty Questions).

Every age group, every fan, has his own favorite TV romance. No matter the group or the individual taste, the fan loves his romance and television has some greats to offer.

My Partner IMOGENE

By SID CAESAR

THE chance that brought Imogene Coca into my professional life is one of those happy breaks that make you believe in FATE. After three years of perfect partnership, it's hard for me to imagine what I would have done without her.

I love that gal. I can say that without fear of making Florence, my wife, jealous. She loves her the same way. It's the kind of feeling you have for somebody who's not only a consummate artist, but a real person of sensitivity and extraordinary gentleness.

In everything she does and in every way she reacts Imogene shows that sensitivity. Her love of animals, for example. She loves all living things and is usually surrounded by an assortment of pets. At the moment she has a French poodle named Apricot, a cat, a shepherd dog and a mynah bird, all living with her in her terraced pent-house. There have been times when, visiting her, you'd have to thread your way through a welter of parrots, turtles, seahorses and once, a skunk. She's so fond of flowers that she hates to throw even the dead ones away. Somebody else has to do it for her.

Imogene has her idiosyncracies—as most artistic people do. Maybe hers are a little more peculiar than most. She's constantly engaged in a battle with mechanical things—elevators, taxicabs (she usually rides in a cab with her head hanging down between her knees). She avoids riding in crowded elevators, and the automatic kind are likely to give her the screaming meemies. She won't ride in a plane except in case of dire emergency, which often makes it tough for me when it means a long train ride to some out-of-town performance. But that's a small price to pay for so valuable a partnership. One thing about us—we respect each other's lunacies.

Then there are her superstitions. She has a barrel of them. Everything she does, she does in pairs. If it's kisses, there are always two. If a pat on the back, it's two pats. It's to make the cycle complete, she explains, if you know what she means.

It's probably because we're so different that we complement each other so perfectly. For example, she hates to eat, and dislikes eating in front of anyone. Me, I love food. I could eat all the time. She has a tendency to underplay her comedy. I am likely to overplay. That's why our association has been so rewarding for me. She keeps me toned down.

Finished Artist

When I first started working with Imogene on the Admiral Revue in 1948, I was virtually a novice, she a finished artist. She was a performer of great polish and wisdom. Fortunately, I had sense enough to profit from her experience. I learned things that, blundering along alone, might have taken me many years to learn. And I'm learning all the time. I've been like a beginner who has the good fortune to be associated with a genius for a master.

This may sound a little exaggerated. But only those who know Imogene can appreciate what I mean—and they are few. She's a hard person to know—she's so shy and honestly unassuming. She never takes her status as star for granted, or presumes on her position.

When we're rehearsing, she waits patiently until she is called, like the greenest little tyro. And she thinks nothing of pinch-hitting for a secretary, answering the phone or distributing mail—a habit that's endeared her to the office force.

But then everybody loves Imogene. She tries to build up everybody who works with her, and never tries to hog a scene. I have to keep her from throwing everything to me.

It's amazing that two people as different as we and as neurotic (let's face it: we are) get along without any friction. Did you ever see two prima donnas, male or female, or assorted, in a clash of opposing temperaments? Well, that's never happened with us. Could be that Max Liebman, our producer, in his quiet, gentle way has something to do with keeping the peace, but I don't think so. Imogene and I respect each other's talents, if you will, have the same point of view and approach to our work, and think so much alike that there's little ground for clashes.

I often wonder what I'd do without Imogene—this bundle of talents who's good at everything—dancing, singing and even straight drama, and whose capacity for pathos and wistfulness is that of a really great artist. It's hard for me to conceive of working without her. For Imogene Coca is my great friend as well as being my "perfect" partner.

FINISHED PERFORMER: "Ever watch the amazing changes of expression on Imogene's face?" asks Sid Caesar. "She's a finished artist at pantomine, song and dance, too."

What's The LIFE EXPECTANCY Of Your TV Set?

TV Digest digs up some interesting facts and figures

THE big question to both old and new TV set owners is "How long will my set last?" So, TV Digest instituted a quick survey and found that various authoritative sources differ in opinions.

Some reputable trade journals estimate that the average set should last eight and one-half years. This average covers all makes of sets and was given by a group of top statisticians in the business.

Local servicemen seem to disagree with this estimate. They point out that a figure of eight and one-half years is assuming a great deal, especially since TV sets have only been in the home for the past five years.

There are also differences of opinion in predictions on the life-expectancy of the picture tube.

Some say the average tube should last for five and one-half years. Others consider this to be the exception rather than the rule. Television servicemen mostly say two years would be a better estimate from their experience in servicing all makes of sets.

In order to pin down these estimates and clarify the diversified opinions, TV Digest checked with the engineering maintenance department of WFIL-TV and received this sound reasoning from an engineer's unbiased standpoint.

The eight and one-half year estimate is probably based on a depreciation point of view as well as an overall life expectancy estimate. Your TV set, at the age of eight and one-half years, would probably have reached a major breakdown stage.

On the matter of life expectancy of a picture tube, the engineering authority feels that two and one-half years or approximately 3,000 hours of use is the best average to consider. This is based on the idea that the average tube is used about five hours per day, day in and day out.

There are recorded instances where a set has been in operation, without benefit of service or maintenance, for three to five years. There are also instances where the same make set, used for the same average number of hours per day, has needed service within a few months. This happens in the best of families, in the best of any and every product manufactured.

From all sources tips for helping prolong the life of a set were received. They include:

1. Do not let your set stand idle, particularly during summer months. Humidity and dampness cause damage, so get a neighbor to turn your set on occasionally while you're vacationing.
2. Don't move your set unnecessarily.
3. Keep the face of your set dusted and clean.
4. Don't snap your set on and off unnecessarily.

After considering all opinions, it would seem the average TV set owner can plan on keeping his present set for eight and one-half years during which time he will need maintenance on small parts five or six times and purchase two new picture tubes. Don't forget that's AVERAGE. Your set may do better . . . or worse.

FRIEND OF THE YOUNG FOLK: The guiding counsel of many youngsters hereabouts is Patches, the coon-skin hatted traveler who sings and tells stories to the young'uns. He's 5 feet 11 inches, weighs 185 pounds, has blue eyes, brown hair, ruddy complexion and leads a rugged outdoor life. The folk songs he sings require a lot of research for he chants mostly original selections in his tenor voice while playing his guitar. Patches is seen twice weekly on Channel 10.

PATCHES . . .

That man in the coonskin cap

The kids know him as Patches, his real name is Jarrett Spottswood Lickle. His friends call him Spotty.

That individual is the elegant prince-like traveler with the tattered but not dirty or crummy clothes who delights the kids on Ch. 10's Old Story, Just Us Kids, and Pioneer Playhouse. His garb includes a coonskin cap, buckskins, moccasins, and a sack tossed over his shoulder.

Originally in getting his costume ready for the show, holes were ripped in the material and patches inserted to give him his TV moniker. But as time wore on, the kids decided the patches weren't the right ones and they sent in gaily-colored ones. Patches ripped the old ones out and now sports patches that were gifts from his fans.

Although the 27-year-old Patches only does weekend shows here, he's a busy man down in his country home in Monkton, Md., 25 miles from Baltimore. He does TV shows four days a week there and spends his spare time hunting, camping and fishing.

Patches began in radio at 15 doing hillbilly type singing. Later while in the service he worked in California before making his TV debut in 1949 in Baltimore and eventually getting an audition at WCAU-TV on the recommendation of his friend, Barry Cassell.

Now Patches sings folk songs, strums his guitar (his wife Cynthia also plays the instrument and they have jam sessions together), tells musical stories, breaks down biblical stories so the children can understand them, and is proud of being the first soloist at the first service in the first chapel erected on Tarawa.

Bouquets 'n Barbs

By Hank O'Hare

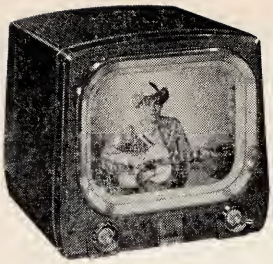
When amateurs try for a prize or a chance to go a step ahead in those talent shows, it's usually a painful thing for this columnist to watch. Not that I disapprove of giving fresh young talent wider opportunities. I'm completely in favor of offering as much incentive and encouragement to show business newcomers as is possible.

What irks me is that the chances of a lifetime and the top prizes are mostly going to the wrong kind of "talent." I've seen it happen in show after show.

In most such shows singers compete with magicians; dancers stack up against musicians, while ventriloquists battle with acrobats. It seems to be the audience's job to say whether one's violin-playing is better than another's tap dance. Without knowing that this is pretty hard to do, the audience pitches in enthusiastically, forgetting there's only one common denominator for all. That little common denominator is talent.

My big beef is that too frequently it's the singer who sings the loudest who gets the nod. Or, it's the flashiest and trashiest stuff that gets the recognition, not the real talent. Those who've been taught the motions of entertaining in much the same manner as a trained dog are the ones who win the prizes. It's the imitators and the automatons that win the big chance. Too few of the winners are chosen because they are even faintly original or because they display real talent.

The show world is loaded down with bewildered youngsters who've been primed by doting mothers into being the "trained dog" kind of entertainer. When it comes to a showdown as professional entertainers they can't compete. There's plenty of room for new ideas in entertainment but the audiences are still choosing the "dogs." The talented youngsters in the competition get the go-by.



HOW TO WIN A NEW MOTOROLA TV

Three to be awarded in TV DIGEST Limerick Contest

There's wide viewer appeal between "What's Cookin'" and "Ramar of the Jungle"—but a happy TV Digest reader will get a TV set from one of them.

The ladies' show and the adventure serial make up the second Channel Six Limericks contest. Complete one of the rhymes about them printed below and you're eligible for some valuable prizes.

Again this week (and next) top prize is a 17" table-model Motorola TV. Another new Motorola product—the Pin-Up Clock Radio, will go to second prize winner. Third and fourth are TV Digest table lighters.

Complete as many official entry blanks as you desire. Only one outstanding limerick line is needed to win the TV set.

To make it easy to write a winner this week, watch "What's Cookin'" or "Kitchen Calendar" Monday through Friday, 2:30-3:00 p.m. Mary Durante and Violet Hale show you how to be a better homemaker, and demonstrate unusual cookery. Jon Hall's adventures with Ramar of the Jungle are seen 4:15 to 5:00 p.m.

CONTEST RULES

1. Entries will be judged solely on the basis of appropriateness and originality.
2. Any number of entries may be submitted each week, provided official entry blanks are used.
3. Decision of the judges will be final. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.
4. Personnel of TV Digest and WFIL-TV and families are not eligible to compete.
5. Winners to be announced in an early issue of TV Digest.

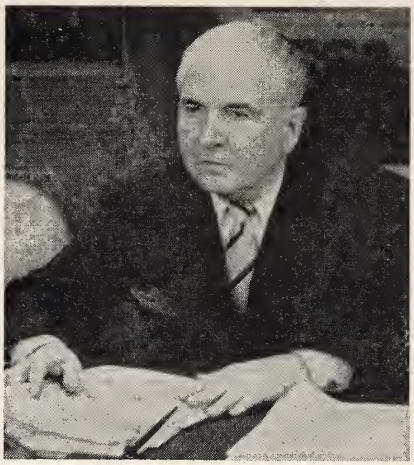
T-MEN TO A T

TV's Treasury Men Portray The Real-life Staff Of the Treasury Dept.



THE CHIEF: Walter Greaza, Chief of TV's T-Men, has also been heard on radio as Inspector Ross on "Crime Doctor" and Steve Wilson on "Big Town."

ON September 11, 1950, televiewers heard introductory music from Shostakovitch's Ninth Symphony as the panel on their video screen read "Treasury Men in Action." Thus one of television's most authentic half-hour suspense dramas was inaugurated. Walter Greaza faced the audience from across his Washington desk at the premiere just as he does today.

Based on case histories from the files of the United States Treasury Department, T-Men, in it's believable method of presentation, has earned the approval and endorsement of the Treasury Department to the extent that it is permitted to use the Department seal.

Scripts Officially Okayed

T-Men can truly be called a documentary type show, for the scripters go through government files to dig up actual cases that can be whipped into a half-hour program. Every script must pass the scrutiny of the U.S. Treasury Department and given an official okay before it can be presented to the public.

A live show integrated with film shots, T-Men is filmed on a studio set whenever possible but in many instances the shots are honest-to-goodness "on the scene" pictures. An example of this was a script which had the agents chasing some moonshiners. The Chief, Walter Greaza, was suppose to order his men to go out and do field work. The show producers had the agent-actors do just that, accompanied by a camera crew. As a result televiewers were actually witnessing the blowing up of a West Virginia still when it happened on their TV screens.

Treasury Department protocol is something which must be watched carefully by all involved with the presentation of T-Men. Greaza, as Chief of the Bureau, is permitted the license of touching his agents, perhaps grabbing one of them by the shoulder to emphasize a point or placing a hand on the agent's arm to commend him. But never is an agent allowed to lay hands on the boss. In an emergency, such as dragging the Chief out of danger, laying on of hands would probably be okayed. But in normal conversation or scenes, the agent must keep hands off the headman.

Thus, though the viewers may not see as much gunplay or heroic deeds in T-Men as they see when one of the fictional private eyes go in action, they can rest assured that what they see on T-Men is authentic and has actually happened in real life.

Sports Glimpses

By HARVEY POLLACK

Red Auerbach, coach of the Boston Celtics, has the story to end all stories in evaluating TV's worth.

The Celtics have been averaging about 3000 fans or so at their games in the Hub despite having some of the greatest talent in pro basketball in Bob Cousy, Bill Sharman, and Ed Macauley. So several weeks ago they televised a game with New York which wound up 103-100 in Boston's favor. This game caused such an upheaval in Boston that papers, radio and TV stations were bombarded with questions about basketball.

People wanted to know how to see the Celtics play. They wanted to know who Cousy was. The managing editor of one newspaper became a fan in one game. He ordered his sports editor to go all out in publicizing the sport. Another paper devoted a whole page to explaining the sport of basketball, using Auerbach's new book and its diagrams for examples. The owner of the TV station that carried the game also owns a string of radio stations throughout New England. And the Celtics got themselves about $5,000 worth of free publicity as the Boston doings were heralded.

With all this buildup, after the televising of only one game, the Celtics were set for their next home contest. But they weren't set for what happened. For more than 13,000 people, the largest crowd in the history of the team, packed the arena to see the game. And mind you, the game was televised too.

The Celtics thought it might be just a one-time deal, but in the next game on a snowy night, more than 8500 people came to the game. And the crowds have been staying high ever since even though the games are still televised on Sunday afternoons.

Anyway, here's an example of how TV helps attendance to ram down the throats of such disbelievers as the NCAA.

Norman Brooks Is a Triple Threat Man

FOOTBALL isn't the only field in which triple threat men appear. Norman Brooks has added television to that category by his versatile talents before the WPTZ cameras.

Norman can do a lot of things and does them all well. He does four news shows daily. In the sports line, he spiels off with Sports Final each week. As a host and genial emcee, Norm excels on Pick Your Ideal.

In each sphere he's had the background to make him an expert. In the news line, he's been doing that type for over two years on TV and previously had worked in radio stations in Ithaca, Atlantic City, and Norristown. As a sports background, the 5 foot 8 inch announcer had a playing career which included free style and backstroking on Atlantic City High's and Cornell's swimming squad and a berth on Cornell's 150-pound football team. Moreover, he also did play by play accounts of various sports on radio stations and served as sports director also.

When it comes to his acting ability, the hazel-eyed Philadelphia native (although he spent most of his life in Atlantic City) has lots of education. He majored in dramatics and public speaking at Cornell, performed for the Big Red dramatic club whose grads included Dan Duryea, Franchot Tone, and Adolphe Menjou, and attended the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London.

"And yet I'm not doing much acting," he confesses. "I have the ham in me and I want to act. I also like to write and have a three-act play all done."

There have been many high spots in the life of the 32-year-older. His knowledge of French was so good that he spent his service days with the French Army as an American Liason Officer and received the Croix de Guerre for his work in North Africa, Italy, and Southern France.

If you've noticed a scar on his left cheek, that mark came about during the war at Heidelberg, Germany. He was driving a jeep and he hit a mine which blew up and sent him to the hospital for major repairs.

Other facts: He and Bob Graham played brothers in the senior play at Atlantic City; lives in St. Davids with his wife and 5-year-old son; has to get up daily at 5 A.M., recalls the time Ernie Kovacs threw a blanket over his head while he was reading the news, and finds his pockets empty during the month of January as the birthdays of his son, wife, father-in-law and himself and his anniversary and that of his parents fall in that span.
